At Columbia Club.

Ping-pong players at the Columbia University Club were in another lively competition last night, the contestants being riving Griffin and Paul H. Ringer. The former finally won the match, which was in the fourth round of the championship tournament, after a gruelling bit of work in the last set. The score was 6-2, 14-12.

Both Griffin and Ringer had won their matches in the third round earlier in the evening. The former defeated G. S. Nicholas, jr., and the latter A. Douglas. When they took their places at the table each was in prime stroke for a keenily fought match. In the first set of the table each was in prime stroke for a keening fought match. In the first set can be frequently aced Ringer for the point.

The last play was a great exhibition of swift work by both of the men. Neither could gain the advantage, a though they were often within a point of taking the set. On the twety fifting ame Ringer lost the accuracy of his place shots and Griffin by steadiness gained the victory.
